Alderney Civil Service secures support

Over the last year a number of senior staff have retired or relocated from the Civil Service and have not yet been replaced.

James Dent, Chairman of the States Employment Board, said “We are going through a time of change and are conscious that the loss from a number of senior positions, combined with Covid19 and Brexit, has created considerable pressure on the States team, both the elected Members and the staff. We are therefore delighted to have secured the services of Adrian Lewis, the current Chief Secretary of Home Affairs in Guernsey, to provide additional executive support on an interim basis.”

Adrian Lewis is an experienced senior civil servant and a familiar face on the Island.
